WATER WAGONS

By Mack Sennett /

Clyde and Richardson are rivals for the honors of the yacht race. Clyde's daughter, Madeline, meets Sid, a sailor, on a train. After many adventures trying to elude a traffic cop, they escape. On the day of the race Clyde's boat is five miles inland. As it is on wheels, they arrive in time. Madeline in Richardson's boat tries to sink it but is thrown in the ocean. Clyde's engine dies, but a torpedo hits it and carries it toward the finish line. Just before it gets there the torpedo explodes and Sid and Madeline are catapulted to the crow's nest of a battleship.
